

FEARKINGDOM

by Kornél Szilágyi, Linn Löffler

SYNOPSIS

About 30 years ago, it was Hungary that tore down the Iron Curtain by opening its borders for East German refugees. But in 2015, the Hungarian government had a new border fence made of barbed wire rebuilt along the Serbian-Croatian border. How do the inhabitants of the border zone feel about it? The power of spaces and symbols with a fence as the main protagonist is negotiate in FEARKINGDOM.
