

HOUSE OF OUR OWN

by Dagmar Scheibert

SYNOPSIS

It's a sunny spring day. We listen to heartfelt letters of a young lady writing to her parents in the 50ies. Her phrases are interrupted by voices from the bankers using technical jargon, quotes by the town municipals. They are Kafkaesque in their obscurity opposite to the factual speech of architects and working secretaries remembering the invoices...Together they act similar to a score and underline the pictures, which are showing strange things happing to this house of our own in Germany so called 'Eigenheim'.
