

MOVING LIBRARIES - WHERE BOOKS MEAN THE WORLD

by Michael Bernstein, Anja Schürenberg

SYNOPSIS

Discover the world with original mobile libraries and their no less unusual librarians. Mobile librarians take books to places where people live on the edge or offside and the next book is just too far away. They take us with them when they travel with their books - in India, Italy, the USA, the Caribbean or Colombia - they tell us about their motives, their infectious enthusiasm for reading and acquaint us with the world of their readers.

- Caribbean with Micha Roggensinger

In the southern Caribbean, there is a truly unique ship, the "Logos Hope", sailing the waters. It is filled with books and volunteers to distribute them to people. Micha Roggensinger has been part of them for a year. He works in the bookstore of the largest floating library in the world, which travels the world's seas to primarily pursue its Christian mission. In Kingstown, the capital of St. Vincent, it's extremely popular. Thousands of the island's inhabitants come on board and select books.
