

MY FATHERS HOUSE

by Michael Majerski

SYNOPSIS

The last remaining witnesses who could not leave the former German territories at the end of World War II talk about their first encounters with the new Polish resettlers who took over their homes and farms in 1945. What distinguishes My Father's House from other films about this subject matter is the direct confrontation between the former enemies. For the first time, Polish witnesses break their long silence to tell what they saw back then. original version with German and Polish subtitles available
