

REALITY MUST BE ADDRESSED

by Johanna Seggelke

SYNOPSIS

"I have found out that there ain't no surer way to find out whether you like people or hate them than to travel with them." Even though Sky and Johanna definitely did not have this quote by Mark Twain in mind, it's written in the stars of the two young women's journey through South Africa. A chance acquaintance turns into a relationship that shimmers in all the colours of love. Between Marmite toasts, joints, selfies and music they explore each other inside out. But what happens when the journey ends?

In this deeply personal piece, filmmaker Johanna Seggelke chooses a very different approach to its predecessor, "Bibi Must Go" from 2020. She questions herself, her feelings and memories and almost casually unfolds an enchanting coming-of-age story about a love that emerges and fades in the seemingly endless summer. With a light hand, the film maintains the delicate balance between shimmering beauty and incidentality and manages to make the complicated dialectics of...
