

SILENT DAYS

by Miriam Bliese

SYNOPSIS

A normal street somewhere in Berlin. It's winter. The people who are doing their shopping or taking the bus here have to go to work or to school, they're unemployed or retired. Once in a while a car goes by, apart from that it's relatively quiet. Then the first snow of the year starts falling and for a moment everything changes. The sounds fade out, the light gets brighter and the movements get more cautious. It seems as if the people themselves were changing. A documentary about the first snow of the year in Berlin.
