SYNOPSIS

Why do some people manage to implement even difficult-to-realize life plans, but others do not? What does it take to be successful and happy in life? Are talent, external life circumstances and lucky coincidences decisive, or are there other factors that are more important? Philosopher Godehard Bruentrup accompanies Tamara Dietl (author, coach), Moritz Stahl (saxophonist) and Katharina Klein (actress, clown) on their search for a meaningful life.
