

STUTTGART 21 - THINK TO REMEMBER!

by Lisa Sperling, Florian Kläger

SYNOPSIS

"Were you at Monday's demo?" Since January 2009, that's been the question of all questions. Clever, inquisitive, open and creative, Stuttgart's citizens have made themselves heard: the old and the young, whether manager, artist, housewife or shop assistant. Lisa Sperling and Florian Kläger, two young filmmakers, depict the development of one of the largest citizens' initiative in years in their debut documentary Stuttgart 21 - Denk mal! It's no longer just about a new train station, but also about the movement and its many faces. The film wants to show that something has evolved in Stuttgart: a form of protest that is new to the city and all of Germany. Stuttgart 21 - Denk mal! will be coming to the Berlinale straight from the cutting room for its world premiere in Perspektive Deutsches Kino: on Friday, February 18, 2011, at 4:30 pm in Cinemaxx 3 at Potsdamer Platz. "It's great we'll be able to show the work of two young film students, who have positioned..."
