

TEATRO AMAZONAS – THE ART OF SOUND AND NATURE

by Friedemann Hottenbacher

SYNOPSIS

It probably took a visionary obsession similar to that of Fitzcarraldo, the eccentric entrepreneur and opera lover in Werner Herzog's film of the same name to build an opera house in the middle of the largest contiguous rainforest area in the world.

After the decline of the rubber industry, the music in the house also falls silent. The memory fades, the house sinks into a thorny sleep. But the myth of the Amazon lives on...

TEATRO AMAZONAS is a portrait of an opera house that reflects the cultural human spaces of European modernity and is also a cinematic reflection.
