

TEXAS - KABUL

by Helga Reidemeister

SYNOPSIS

Helga Reidemeister portrays four women from Afghanistan—Jamila Mujahed, India—Arundhati Roy, Serbia—Stasa Zajovic and the USA—Sissy Farenthold, who demonstrate their opposition to nationalism and war.

In TEXAS—KABUL director Helga Reidemeister shows four committed women, who do not tolerate war and don't want to be silent about it.

A political road movie, a journey around the planet, searching for meaning in times of war, and a journey into the own past. The director, worried by the announcement of the wars following the tragedy of September 11th in New York, seeks allies to act prudently in the panic erupted.

She finds four women in four different countries of the world. Arundhati Roy, from New Delhi, world famous writer of the novel "The God of Small Things" is considered to be "the voice of the third world" and a militant opponent of globalization.

Stasa Zajovic, from Belgrade, a founder of the pacifist group "Women in Black", was active in resistance against...
