

THE UNDENIABLE BEAUTY OF BEING

by Ira Tondowski

SYNOPSIS

When doctors discover that Leonard has brittle bone disease, they give him a life expectancy of one year.

Today, Leonard is in his mid-20s, a screenwriter, director and actor. He gets around in a wheelchair, he is small, his body is different, he lives independently and self-determined, and he says: "I don't hate my body. I find my body annoying sometimes, yes, and I have goals that sometimes go beyond that, but these are still achievable."
