

WOLF AT THE DOOR

by Wolf Gremm

SYNOPSIS

In 2011 director and screenwriter Wolf Gremm is diagnosed with prostate cancer. According to the doctors, he only has about eight months to live. Naturally the devastating news shatters his active and fulfilled life initially, but soon he decides to fight back and go on the offensive with regard to his condition. From this point on a smartphone and a mini-camera are his constant companions.

For Wolf the documentary is about what the cancer is doing to him: capturing intimate moments of pain and fear but also tracking his hope of obtaining the best possible therapy. Gremm doesn't hide behind his disease; he accepts the cancer as part of himself. He records insights that many people wouldn't want to share with the world – authentic and relentless.
